Much of the inner reef at Oahu's Hanauma Bay is dead after decades of tourist interaction, but the outer reef is still relatively healthy. More than 2,000 reef scientists, policymakers and stakeholders are gathering in Honolulu starting today to discuss the latest coral science and what can be done to stop widespread death of the world's reefs.

HONOLULU — After the most powerful El Nino on record heated the world's oceans to never-before-seen levels, huge swaths of once vibrant coral reefs that were teeming with life are now stark white ghost towns disintegrating into the sea.

And the world's top marine scientists are still struggling in the face of global warming and decades of devastating reef destruction to find the political and financial wherewithal to tackle the loss of these globally important ecosystems.

"What we have to do is to really translate the urgency," said Ruth Gates, president of the Free lunch remains hard sell

Usage up, but Hawaii students still ignoring federally funded meals

> By KIRSTEN JOHNSON Hawaii Tribune-Herald

More students in Hawaii are taking advantage of free, federally funded summer meals, but participation as a whole still lags behind other states, a new report claims.

The yearly "Hunger Doesn't Take a Vacation: Summer Nutrition Status Report," compiled by the Washington, D.C.-based Food Research and Action Center, ranks Hawaii No. 47 in the country for the percentage of students who ate free federal meals last summer in comparison to the school year.

On average, about 5,411 Hawaii students ate summer meals each day in July 2015, which is 8.4 percent of the roughly 64,139 who ate daily during in the 2014-15 school year.

The center wants 40 percent nationwide of those served in the school year to take advantage of summer meals, spokeswoman Signe Anderson said. However only one jurisdiction — Washington, D.C., — met that goal, the report shows.

"Summer is complicated," Anderson said. "During the school year, you have buses taking (kids) to school during lunch hour, in the summer ... the need is huge, it's just the logistics of getting kids to the site. That gets much more challenging in the summer."

Federal summer meal programs aim to help kids who may have food insecurities at home continue receiving nutritious meals once school's out.

This year, at least 15 Big Island schools are participating in the News in brief

Fire scares L.A. as larger blazes burn across West

LOS ANGELES (AP) -A brush fire that broke out Sunday near downtown Los Angeles threatened a densely populated, hilly neighborhood along a freeway as sizzling temperatures elevated fire danger across the West.

Crews knocked down the blaze in the Silver Lake neighborhood after it damaged two homes, destroyed three shedlike structures, scorched yards and sent trees up in flames.

Neighbors scrambled with garden hoses and buckets, while water-dropping helicopters and scores of firefighters chased embers and doused steep hillsides to keep the flames from spreading.

The blaze only charred 8 acres, but it put urban residents on alert to the hot, dry conditions that have helped wildfires spread rapidly across more remote places from the California coast to New Mexico.

A fire that has burned 12 square miles west of Santa Barbara stayed in check, but firefighters braced for the return of afternoon and evening gusts that fanned the flames earlier in the week, threatening hundreds of homes and leading to evacuations of popular coastal campgrounds.

The fire was just over halfway contained.

Attorney General: Mateen investigation moving forward

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) -Although the killer is known, the investigation continues into what motivated and enabled Omar Mateen to carry out the worst mass shooting in modern U.S. history.

Attorney General Loretta Lynch said in interviews Sunday on several news shows that the FBI would release a partial printed transcript of the conversations between gunman Mateen from within the Pulse nightclub and Orlando police negotiators. Armed with a semi-automatic weapon, Mateen went on a bloody rampage at the club June 12 that left 49 people dead and 53 others seriously hurt.

Mateen died in a hail of police gunfire after police stormed the venue.

Lynch told ABC's "This Week" that the top goal while intensifying pressure on IS the extremist group thought to have inspired Mateen — is to build a complete profile of him in order to help prevent another massacre like Orlando.

"As you can see from this investigation, we are going back and learning everything we can about this killer, about his contacts, people who may have known him or seen him. And we're trying to build that profile so that we can move forward," Lynch said.

Lynch said she would be traveling to Orlando on Tuesday to meet with investigators.

'Star Trek' actor Anton Yelchin killed when his car hits him

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Anton Yelchin, a rising actor best known for playing Chekov in the new "Star Trek" films, was killed by his own car as it rolled down his driveway early Sunday, police and his publicist said.

The car pinned Yelchin, 27, against a brick mailbox pillar and a security fence at his home in Los Angeles, Officer Jenny Hosier said.

He had gotten out of the vehicle momentarily, but police did not say why he was behind it when it started rolling.

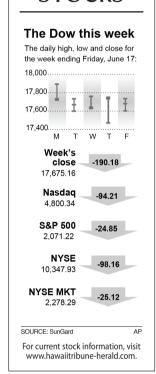

Yelchin was on his way to meet friends for a rehearsal, Hosier said.

When he didn't show up, the group came to his home and found him dead.

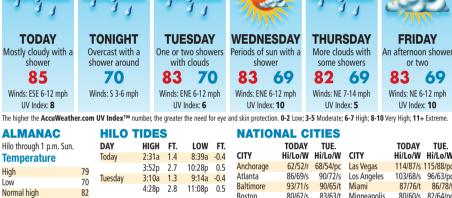

The freak accident tragically cuts short the promising career of an actor whom audiences were still getting to know and who had great artistic ambition. "Star Trek Beyond," the third film in the rebooted series, comes out in July.

Director J.J. Abrams, who cast Yelchin in the franchise, wrote in a statement that he was "brilliant ... kind ... funny as hell, and supremely talented."

the man said as she closed the door behind her.

Out of options, Claire did as he requested. He then motioned her over to the bed.

"If you let me give you a back massage, I'll give you another $200."

"I don't really want you to touch me," Claire replied.

"It's fine," the man said calmly, "I promise, I won't do anything else."

Hesitant, she acquiesced. A few minutes later, the situation escalated further.

"I'll give you $500 more to have sex with me," the man proposed, his tone and body language growing more predatory.

Claire refused. She moved to redress herself, and that's when the man grabbed her. That's when he subdued her. That's when Claire — who spent much of five years between the ages 17 and 22 living on or close to the streets — was raped.

Some minutes later, as Claire dressed to leave, her offender offered a second proposition.

"I've got $1,000 for you if you'll stay the weekend," he said, as though he hadn't just brutally assaulted her.

with sexual assault.
According to the National Sexual Violence Resource Center (NSVRC), a study of homeless and marginally housed individuals published in 2003 found that 32 percent of women in that population reported physical or sexual assault within the previous year.

Another study referenced by the NSVRC and published in 2002 indicated that roughly 38 percent of women engaging in 'survival sex' — a more appropriate term for Claire's experiences than prostitution — reported forced sex.

"I think homeless women are more (susceptible to) sexual assault and repeat assaults because they're a vulnerable population," said Lorraine Davis, Chief Operating Officer at the YWCA of Hawaii Island, which offers a sexual assault support services program. "Perpetrators look for the vulnerable person."

Or in Claire's case, a desperate victim returns to her abuser when there's nowhere else to go.

She arrived on Hawaii Island at the age of 17, having just finished a year in rehab at an inpatient facility in Utah. At the behest of her father, Claire was set to register at a Christian educational program meant to prepare future missionaries for discipleship throughout the world.

It was less than a day before she bolted, and that night she ended up drinking heavily at the home of a handful of male strangers she'd met earlier in the afternoon while strolling down Alii Drive. She woke up on the couch the next morning with signs of sexual activity visible across her body, including a large hickey on her neck, but had no recollection of the evening before.

"I wouldn't say I was raped, but I got way too drunk and people had sex with me," Claire said. "It was kind of rape, but I was putting myself in the situation."

The treatment Claire described is encompassed by the FBI's definition of rape — any sexual penetration perpetrated against someone without his or her consent.

A short while after Claire started beach bumming off Alii Drive, she found herself in Hilo, again with a man of advanced age.

"I was hungry," she said. "I knew he wanted to use me, and I almost felt like I kind of had to let him so he'd let me stay there and feed me. I remember feeling disgusted with myself at that point because I was like, 'Did I just have sex with someone for Top Ramen?' But I didn't know anyone else over there, and I had nowhere else to go."

Off the street

After she left Hawaii and returned to her home in Washington state, Claire struggled with drug addiction for several more years. It required a stint in prison and a car accident that almost claimed the life of one of her best friends in January of 2015 before she was finally ready to turn her life around.

Claire has been clean since that day, nearly 18 months. Approaching her 24th birthday, she now works two jobs as a waitress, is enrolling to pursue her associate's degree in psychology in the fall and is an avid skydiver.

She had family and friends to lean — but for many women rendered homeless by sexual and/ or domestic violence, or ravaged by such violence once they hit the streets — there is no family. There are no friends.

For those women, Hawaii Island offers several outreach centers that offer an opportunity to transition from assault victims to assault survivors, while raising up off the street in the process.

Programs include
HOPE Services, the
YWCA of Hawaii
Island, Lokahi
Treatment Centers and Child & Family Services West Hawaii.

"There is shame and guilt for the way I left family, and learning how to have healthy relationships has been a slow process of learning to trust people," Claire said. "Addiction and mental health issues are problems for many homeless, but there is help. You can find those who can relate, who figured out how to get out it, and they will help you."

LUNCH From the front page

USDA-funded "Seamless Summer Option," a federal program available at schools where at least 50 percent of students are eligible for free and reduced lunch — currently defined as $51,597 for a family of four.

A school must offer summer programs in order to participate in Seamless Summer Option.

Unlike school-year meals, available only to children who submit forms demonstrating they meet the income requirement, Seamless Summer meals are served to any child under 18.

The state Department of Education believes the number of federal meals served this summer will be higher — spokesman Brent Suyama said there are more sites participating in the program this year than last.

East Hawaii school administrators told the Tribune-Herald nearly all students who attend summer programs locally eat meals offered. For example all 400 students enrolled in summer programs at Waiakea High School eat lunch each day, Principal Kelsy Koga said, and those not on campus generally don't make a special trip.

"Unless they have a reason for coming here, they really won't, especially at the high school level," Koga said. "... They're not going to just come and eat and leave. I don't know of anyone that just comes for lunch."

Administrators say there are other variables that could affect participation numbers on the Big Island—such as access to transportation, said Chad Farias, Ka'u-Keaau-Pahoa complex area superintendent.

"The students who need the meals the most, those are the kids where transportation may be the biggest issue," Farias said.

The report ranked Hawaii dead last in the previous year, when 4,243 meals on average were served each day, which is 6.4 percent of the 66,645 served during the 2013-14 school year.

DOE stats show more than 60 percent of students in the Hilo-Waiakea Complex Area qualify for free or reduced-price meals. In the KKP complex area, that number is near 83.55 percent.

Starting next year, every student in KKP schools will get free meals — even if they don't qualify for free or reduced-priced meals — because the state Department of Education announced earlier this year it was expanding the federal Community Eligibility Provision program to all of the complex area's schools.

International Society for Reef Studies and director of the Hawaii Institute of Marine Biology.

Gates, who helped organize a conference this week for more than 2,000 international reef scientists, policymakers and others, said the scientific community needs to make it clear how "intimately reef health is intertwined with human health."

The International Coral Reef Symposium convenes Monday to try to create a more unified conservation plan for coral reefs. She said researchers have to find a way to implement large scale solutions with the help of governments.

Consecutive years of coral bleaching have led to some of the most widespread mortality of reefs on record, leaving scientists in a race to save them. While bleached coral often recovers, multiple years weakens the organisms and increases the risk of death.

Researchers have achieved some success with projects such as creating coral nurseries and growing forms of "super coral" that can withstand harsher conditions. But much of that science is being done on a very small scale with limited funding.

Bob Richmond, director of the University of Hawaii's Kewalo Marine Laboratory, said the problems are very clear: "overfishing of reef herbivores and top predators, land-based sources of pollution and sedimentation, and the continued and growing impacts of climate change."

While reefs are major contributors to many coastal tourist economies, saving the world's coral isn't just about having pretty places for vacationers to explore. Reefs are integral to the overall ecosystem and are an essential component of everyday human existence.

Reefs not only provide habitat for most ocean fish consumed by humans, but they also shelter land from storm surges and rising sea levels. Coral has even been found to have medicinal properties.

In one project to help save reefs, researchers at the University of Hawaii's Institute of Marine Biology have been taking samples from corals that have shown tolerance for harsher conditions in Oahu's Kaneohe Bay and breeding them with other strong strains in slightly warmer than normal conditions to create a super coral.

The idea is to make the corals more resilient by training them to adapt to tougher conditions before transplanting them into the ocean.

Another program run by the state of Hawaii has created seed banks and a fast-growing coral nursery for expediting coral restoration projects.

Most of Hawaii's species of coral are unlike other corals around the world in that they grow very slowly, which makes reef rebuilding in the state difficult. So officials came up with a plan to grow large chunks of coral in a fraction of the time it would normally take.

Coral reefs have almost always been studied up close, by scientists in the water looking at small portions of reefs.

But NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory is taking a wider view, from about 23,000 feet above. NASA and other scientists recently launched a three-year campaign to gather new data on coral reefs worldwide. They are using specially designed imaging instruments attached to aircraft.

"The idea is to get a new perspective on coral reefs from above, to study them at a larger scale than we have been able to before, and then relate reef condition to the environment," said Bermuda Institute of Ocean Sciences' Eric Hochberg, principal investigator for the project.

Their View

Why keep banning gay men from giving blood?

n the days since Omar Mateen burst into an Orlando, Fla., club and shot more than 100 people, most of them gay men, pledges to help the gay community have poured in from around the world.

And then there's the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, which is being anything but helpful.

In the hours after the shooting, as thousands of people were rushing to Central Florida blood banks to help the victims, the FDA doubled down on a little-known policy that prohibits some gay and bisexual men from donating blood.

It used to be that all gay and bisexual men were banned. Now it's only those who have had sex with another man within the last year. It doesn't matter if that sexual activity was within a marriage or a monogamous relationship. They can't donate blood.

In Orlando, that means the men most affected by the shooting, the worst in modern U.S. history, have been unable to help their husbands, boyfriends and friends, while straight donors who may have had 10 sexual partners in the past year and have no idea if they've been exposed to HIV have been free to donate blood.

The reasons why are flimsy at best and discriminatory at worst. The FDA says it's to prevent the transmission of HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. Sexually active gay and bisexual men are most likely to have HIV, the agency argues, and so must be eliminated from the pool of blood donors.

But that's a circular argument that is full of wrong-headed assumptions and outdated thinking.

To have such a policy at all assumes that every male donor is honest about his sexual history when he donates blood. In reality, it's more like trust but verify at blood banks. All donated blood is tested for infectious disease markers, including HIV.

The FDA also, inexplicably, is leaning on an old way of thinking about HIV. One from the early days of the AIDS epidemic, when most people thought AIDS was a "gay disease." We now know that's not true. HIV can be transmitted between heterosexual partners as well as IV drug users.

Any American who donates blood already gets asked: "In the past 12 months, have you had sexual contact with anyone who has HIV/AIDS or has had a positive test for the HIV/AIDS virus?"

There's no need to also ask men: "Have you had had sexual contact with another male in the past 12 months?" And ask women: "Have you had had sexual contact with a male who had sexual contact with another male in the past 12 months?" That's beside the point.

It's time for the FDA to stop unfairly singling out an entire demographic for no good reason. If we take anything from the tragedy in Orlando, it should be that.

— The Sacramento Bee

GOP's fowl response to attack

ASHINGTON — This is how the sausage is made: After last weekend's terrorist attack in Orlando, the people's representatives in Washington scrambled to counter the growing threat to national security ... from vegetarianism.

A 14-hour filibuster by Senate Democrats to force action on keeping guns out of the hands of terrorists produced little: They'll get a vote, but the measure is likely to be defeated by Republicans on Monday.

House GOP leadership, meanwhile, killed a Democratic effort to extend non-discrimination protections for gay people — the demographic targeted in the Orlando shooting.

But the House on Thursday did pass a plan to block the spreading menace to the U.S. military posed by Meatless Mondays.

"I rise to ensure that our men and women in uniform have options on their menu when they seek nutrition in the cafeteria," Rep. Adrian Smith, a Nebraska Republican, proclaimed. "Ideologically motivated activists are working to take meat off the menu in institutions across the country."

But Rep. Peter Visclosky, an Indiana Democrat, had a beef with that argument. "I appreciate the gentleman's concern about ideological activists attacking the menus at the Department of Defense, but I do trust they will have the intestinal fortitude to resist those particular attacks," he said. He assured his cattle-state opponent that "there is no policy under consideration to eliminate meat from the nutritional programs for our military services."

Indeed, a Pentagon spokesman investigating the matter had found no evidence of an anti-meat campaign by Thursday night. But Smith was bullheaded in his advocacy. "Meat contains vitamins and nutrients not readily available in a plantbased diet," he argued. "In fact, creatine, which supplies energy to muscle cells and aids in recovery, is only found in animal products.'

The Democrat would not be branded anti-carnivore. "I did have meat at lunch yesterday. I ate meat last night," he said. But he objected to Republicans, who like to complain about regulatory overreach, attempting to legislate menus.

"Should we start considering whether we should be using diced tomatoes in our various food service areas, or should we do whole tomatoes?" he asked. "Should we,

when we serve tuna-fish, have chunk white or solid white?"

Thus was the response to the Orlando atrocity. Lawmakers declined to keep guns and explosives out of suspected terrorists' hands. They refused to extend equal protection to gay Americans. But they bravely repelled an imaginary threat to hamburgers.

Never mind that the Pentagon is attacking neither red meat nor fish nor fowl. The pro-meat forces prevailed in a voice vote.

And this was part of a profoundly depressing reaction to one of the worst mass killings the country has seen. Donald Trump implied that President Obama was in cahoots with the Islamic State and then tweeted an article from a right-wing publication saying the administration "actively supported" the terrorist group.

Even Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said Obama was "directly responsible" for the attack in Orlando, before clarifying that Obama wasn't personally responsible.

In the House, Republicans aped Trump's anti-immigration histrionics by allowing votes on measures to block the "dreamers" — immigrants brought to the United States illegally as children - from serving in the military. The attempt failed by the thinnest of margins.

GOP leaders refused to vote on an amendment to the National Defense Authorization Act that would protect LGBT employees of federal contractors from discrimination. But they allowed an amendment to the same bill that would protect service members from the invented scourge of Meatless Mondays.

On the floor, Smith noted an "agenda to remove meat" by the U.S. Coast Guard, which has cut meat consumption by cadets at its academy. The Coast Guard wasn't covered under the defense bill, but Rep. Steve King, R-Iowa, still went hog wild. "Our military - we'd starve them for meat? We need them to be aggressive," he said. He held up a photo of Norwegian troops who, he says, have Meatless Mondays and therefore can't eat their beloved reindeer meat that day. "Let's have a strong military," King said. "Let them have a lot of protein.'

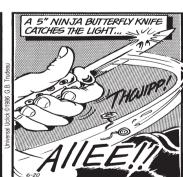

The House vote by itself did not protect the troops from the fanciful threat of creeping vegetarianism. The Senate, in its version of the defense bill, refused to take up a similar amendment by Sen. Joni Ernst, R-Iowa, who spoke of castrating hogs in her famous campaign ad. Ernst said, "the push for Meatless Mondays in our military is misguided."

But this "push" is bull. The dangers our leaders won't address — terrorists getting guns, and legal discrimination against gay people — are real.

Trump using new level of hardhanded tactics against press onald Trump should write the correction on The Washington Post headline that so offended him he revoked the news organization's campaign credentials.

The headline read: "Donald Trump suggests President Obama was involved in Orlando shooting." It was later changed to "Donald Trump seems to connect President Obama to Orlando shooting."

It's common practice for media organizations to write corrections or clarifications about information that might be incorrect or unclear. And Trump's statement that tripped up the Post headline writer was obscure. After the shooting, Trump told Fox News that Obama "doesn't get it, or he gets it better than anybody understands."

The following day, he added, "There's something going on."

What does Trump mean by this innuendo?

It's the job of the journalists to ask that question and to give the candidate a chance to explain. That's what journalists do: examine potential officeholders, question them in order to inform voters about what kind of people want to lead them. But Trump wants none of it. And journalists will do their jobs anyway.

Tiffs over access are nothing new between candidates and the press. In 2011, the Obama administration wrongly banned The Boston Herald from participating in the press pool during a presidential visit. The Herald said the petty action came after an Obama press staffer emailed the paper that the administration did not like an opinion piece criticizing the president's policies. Hillary Clinton's press staff blocked credentials for a foreign newspaper in 2015, opting to give U.S. media preference for travel with the campaign and access to media-only events.

But Trump has taken this tactic to a new level, revoking credentials for at least eight media organizations. While his supporters might share his attitude toward the press, they should take note of a report this week by Harvard University's Shorenstein Center that eight top news outlets gave Trump what amounts to $55 million of free advertising, and about two-thirds of the coverage was positive.

If "there's something going on," if Trump has information that links Obama to the Orlando shootings, surely his supporters would want the press to pursue it.

So far, the only clarification from Trump has been a statement that Obama "continues to prioritize our enemy over our allies," which does little to explain his sinister insinuation.

Journalists will keep asking for clarification and The Washington Post has promised to continue covering Trump "energetically and unflinchingly" despite the loss of credentials.

Iran official: Boeing sale involves 100 planes

Many American firms still wary of trade with country

> By NASSER KARIMI Associated Press

TEHRAN, Iran — Boeing Co. is negotiating a deal to sell 100 airplanes to Iran, state-run media reported Sunday, a sale potentially worth billions that would mark the first major entry of an American company into the Islamic Republic after last year's nuclear deal.

Chicago-based Boeing declined to discuss details of the talks or the figure of 100 planes, attributed to Ali Abedzadeh, the head of Iran's Civil Aviation Organization.

Regulatory hurdles and U.S. sanctions that remain in place after the nuclear agreement could complicate the deal.

Despite efforts by the U.S. State Department to encourage trade to Iran, many American firms remain worried about the legal and political ramifications of any agreements with the country.

The state-run IRAN newspaper quoted Abedzadeh as saying negotiations took "several stages" and final figures and terms had yet to be reached.

"Both sides — Iran and Boeing — have reached a written agreement for buying Boeing airplanes," Abedzadeh was quoted as saying.

Fakher Daghestani, a Boeing spokesman based in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, declined to answer any questions about Abedzadeh's comments.

"Any agreements reached will be contingent on U.S. government approval," Daghestani said in a statement.

in service, but most were purchased before the 1979 Islamic Revolution that ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and brought Islamists to power. Out of Iran's 250 commercial planes, about 150 are flying while the rest are grounded due to lack of spare parts. Parts and servicing remained nearly impossible to get while the world sanctioned Iran over its contested nuclear program.

Included in last year's nuclear deal is approval for airline manufacturers to enter the Iranian market. Already, Iran Air has signed agreements to buy 118 planes from the European consortium Airbus and 20 more from French-Italian aircraft manufacturer ATR.

Iran is a lucrative market, with the Airbus deal alone worth 22.8 billion euros ($25 billion). But Boeing has treaded cautiously.

U.S. sanctions not tied to the nuclear program remain in place, and American lawmakers have warned Boeing not to do business there as the Iran deal remains a hot topic in the ongoing presidential election. Boeing may need to run the sale through an overseas subsidiary and use a currency other than U.S. dollars in order to avoid running afoul of American laws.

In April, Iran's state-run IRNA news agency quoted Maqsoud Asadi Samani, the secretary of the Society of Iranian Airlines, as saying Boeing officials offered 737, 777 and 787 model aircraft on a trip to Tehran.

In his published remarks Sunday, Abedzadeh said that "Iran will not be in a hurry about the agreement since the U.S. has always used Iran's old fleet as leverage."

'Finding Dory' blows animation record out of the water

Pixar film nets $136.2 million over weekend

By LINDSEY BAHR Associated Press

LOS ANGELES -The forgetful blue fish of "Finding Dory" is box office gold. The Pixar sequel far-surpassed its already Ocean-sized expectations to take in $136.2 million in North American theaters, making it the highest-grossing animated debut of all time, according to com-Score estimates Sunday. The 2007 film "Shrek the Third" was the previous record-holder with a $121.6 million debut.

"Finding Dory," which comes 13 years after "Finding Nemo" hit theaters, is also now the second-largest June opening of all time behind "Jurassic World." The well-reviewed film features the voices of Ellen DeGeneres and Albert Brooks and played particularly well with audiences, who gave the film an A CinemaScore — Pixar's 17th film in a row to receive the impressive grade.

Going into the weekend, analysts expected "Finding Dory" to do big, $100 million plus business, but never this much.

"The thought was 'could this be the movie to eclipse "Toy Story 3's" opening,' not, 'could it become the biggest animated opening of all time," said Paul Dergarabedian, comScore's senior media analyst.

"That's the power of the Pixar brand."

'Toy Story 3" was the biggest Pixar opening ever until now with $110.3 million.

Disney's Executive Vice President of Distribution Dave Hollis was particularly heartened that the film did such robust late night business on both Friday and Saturday.

"That's really a testament to this being a picture for everyone – not just for families," Hollis said.

"Finding Dory" has the animated seas to itself until "The Secret Life of Pets" opens July 8.

The Kevin Hart and Dwayne Johnson buddy comedy "Central Intelligence" also had a relatively muscular weekend, with a better-than-expected $34.5 million, putting it in second place.

"It's a real home run," said Jeff Goldstein, Warner Bros.' executive vice president of domestic distribution. "These two comedians are just stars. They connect with their audience and each other in such a strong way. You just laugh when you watch them."

"Central Intelligence" cost a reported $50 million to make and scored especially well with younger audiences, who the studio hopes will propel the word of mouth in weeks to come. The next major comedy releases don't come until mid-July with "Mike and Dave Need Wedding Dates" and "Ghostbusters."

In third place, the James Wan horror pic "The Conjuring 2" fell 62 percent in its second weekend in theaters, earning $15.6 million and bringing its domestic total to $71.7 million.

Rounding out the top five were "Now

Overall, the weekend is down nearly 5 percent from last year, when "Inside Out" launched with $90.4 million and "Jurassic World" earned $106.6 million in its second weekend in theaters.

Still, Dergarabedian notes that the comparatively big audiences this weekend are good for the business in the long run since they'll be exposed to trailers for upcoming summer films.

When the Brain Can't Hear

BY: SUSAN GOOD, AUD. NUEAR CORPORATION

The consequences of an untreated hearing loss are real. Since we collect sound with our ears and process the sound in our brain, over time and without hearing assistance, we can lose the ability to understand the spoken word. This documented process is called "auditory depriva-

Hear what you've been missing! Do you hear, but not understand? Do you miss what is being said or ask others to repeat themselves?

Elizabeth "Lissa" Knue saw an ad in the newspaper. "Maybe these questions apply to me", she thought. She had also been feeling a bit down lately; a common warning sign of someone suffering from hearing loss. Her daughter had been telling her for the longest time "Mom, would you PLEASE go and get your hearing checked."!

Lissa's hearing loss was not her fault. Hearing loss can be so gradual that she, along with so many others, never notice the warning signs. One is six Americans over age 55 suffers from some form of hearing loss, and after the age of 65, that number increases to one in four. Hearing loss, left undetected, can eventually affect the way the brain interprets sound. Lissa made the call.

Within minutes of phoning her local hearing aid office, Lissa had taken the first step toward doing something that would "positively" change her life forever.

Lissa set her appointment with Mr. Scott, a Licensed Hearing Instrument Specialist, who gave Lissa a thorough Hearing Test and Hearing Wellness Evaluation. After reviewing the results, they determined, together, what would work best for Lissa's lifestyle, needs and budget.

Lissa now wears the latest in hearing technology, the NOW, from NuEar. "They're amazing! Everything is so clear and crisp... I hear everything!" Both Lissa and her family are very pleased with the results. "Wow! They're so comfortable! You can't even tell I'm wearing them. Division III is the level some fans want to pinch on the cheek because it's so cute with its lack of scholarships, lack of fancy stadiums and huge support staffs. They do it the old-fashioned way, with students being students and playing athletics as an academic add-on.

Division II is betwixt and between. Some schools, like most of the 14 in the Pacific West Conference, have a full compliment of scholarships, an appropriate supply of assistant coaches and trainers and a budget to make it all work.

At the University of Hawaii at Hilo, the vast, mismatched terrain of Division II comes into focus, and for that reason alone, the school made an admirable decision this month when it hired former tennis coach Kula Oda as its new associated athletics director.

LeBron James celebrates with teammates after compiling a triple-double to lead the Cavaliers to a 93-89 victory at Golden State in Game 7 of the NBA Finals.

James delivers on promise, brings crown to drought-starved Cleveland

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — LeBron James cradled the shiny gold trophy and struggled to sum up what might be his sweetest championship yet, the one he is so proudly bringing home to his native northeast Ohio just as he promised to do when he returned to the Cavaliers two summers ago.

Later, flanked by his three children on Father's Day, a cigar between his lips and winning net as a necklace with the lingering stench of champagne, James began to understand the magnitude of his accomplishment for Cleveland after a half-century wait.

"I'm coming home with what I said I was going to do," he said, adding, "I can't wait to get off that plane, hold that trophy up and see all our fans at the terminal."

James and his relentless, never-count-them-out Cavs pulled off an improbable NBA Finals comeback, and Cleveland is title town again at long last. James delivered on a vow to his home state and brought the Cavs back from the brink as they became the first team to rally from a 3-1 finals deficit, beating the defending champion Golden State Warriors 93-89 on Sunday night to end a 52-year major sports championship drought in Cleveland.

"I've never seen a man in my life tell an entire state: 'Get on my back, I got you. Get on my back and I'm going to carry you. I don't care if we fail, I'm going to wake up the next morning and I'm going to start working out and prepare for the next year," Richard Jefferson said. "... He was like, 'I'm going to come back home because I promised them that I would do something.' And he carried us the whole way."

In a testy series of blowouts — and a few blowups - the winner-take-all Game 7 provided the thrilling finale with James as the finals MVP disarming two-time reigning MVP Stephen Curry and his record-setting Warriors.

Johnson claims U.S. Open for first major championship

Associated Press

OAKMONT, Pa. — Dustin Johnson had everything going his way Sunday in the U.S. Open.

He was playing the best golf on the toughest course. He had a two-shot lead on the back nine at Oakmont. He even got a huge break on a ruling that allowed him to escape deep rough, the kind of breaks that usually go to major champions.

That's when he saw two USGA officials approach him on the 12th tee. They told him he might get a one-shot penalty for his ball moving on the fifth green. They wouldn't know until after his round.

Try playing the back nine of a U.S. Open with that kind of confusion.

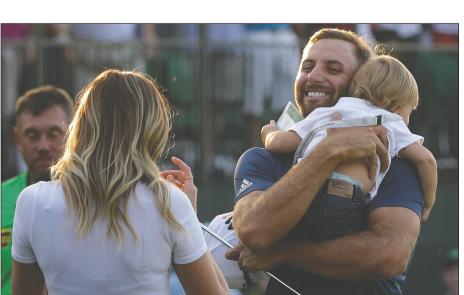

'It's nothing new at this point," said Johnson, who has had major mishaps for the last six years. "It's happened so many times I kind of expect it now."

The difference was the outcome. Johnson showed the mettle and yes, the wits — to finally win a major championship.

'For it to not affect the outcome is fantastic," he said. "It just shows how well I played."

Giants beat Rays, win 8th straight

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. -Brandon Belt homered, Joe Panik hit a tiebreaking RBI single in the eighth, and the San Francisco Giants beat the Tampa Bay Rays 5-1 on Sunday for their eighth straight win.

Jake Peavy (3-6) pitched six solid innings to win for the third time in four starts. Belt hit his team-leading 10th homer off Jake Odorizzi, and Panik delivered in a key situation for the second straight game with his run-scoring single against Xavier Cedeno (3-2) during San Francisco's four-run eighth.

Panik is just 2 for 14 through three games of San Francisco's weeklong road trip, but both hits broke late-inning ties. He hit a three-run homer in the ninth inning of Saturday's 6-4 win over Tampa Bay, which has lost four straight.

CUBS 10, PIRATES 5 CHICAGO — Prized prospect Willson Contreras crushed the first pitch he saw in the major leagues for a two-run home run, Kyle Hendricks struck out a career-high 12 in six innings and Chicago completed a sweep of Pittsburgh.

Contreras, called up from Triple-A on Friday, pinch hit for Hendricks in the sixth and sent A.J. Schugel's changeup an estimated 415 feet to center. The cheering crowd didn't let up until the 24-year-old Venezuelan catcher obliged with a curtain call.

ORIOLES 11, BLUE JAYS 6 BALTIMORE — Matt Wieters homered and drove in four runs, and Baltimore outslugged Toronto to provide right-hander Chris Tillman with his ninth straight victory.

Baltimore amassed a season-high 19 hits against Marcus Stroman (6-3) and five relievers in the deciding matchup of the three-game series between AL East contenders.

BRAVES 6, METS 0 NEW YORK — Julio Teheran tossed a one-hit masterpiece, pitching the Braves to a surprising three-game sweep of the scuffling Mets

Nick Markakis homered and drove in two runs for Atlanta, which has won five straight for the first time since the first five games of last season.

Freddie Freeman had four hits and the Braves finally mustered some offense in support of Teheran (3-7), who yielded only Michael Conforto's clean single leading off the third inning.

ANGELS 2, ATHLETICS 0 OAKLAND, Calif. — Jered Weaver pitched a three-hitter, leading the Angels to the victory.

Weaver (6-6) had given up 11 earned runs over his last 11 1/3 innings before helping Los Angeles to its fifth win in six games against the A's this season. The right-hander struck out one and walked one.

MARLINS 3, ROCKIES 0 MIAMI — Tom Koehler pitched around six walks in six innings and three relievers combined for three perfect innings, helping Miami to the win.

Marcell Özuna hit a three-run drive in the sixth inning for his 13th homer. The Marlins (37-32) climbed five games above .500 for the first time since May 8, 2014, and they'll try for a four-game sweep Monday. DODGERS 2, BREWERS 1 LOS ANGELES — Pinch hitter Yasmani Grandal walked with the bases loaded to end the game, and the Dodgers got another strong start from rookie Kenta Maeda.

Grandal took a 3-2 pitch for from Tyler Thornburg (3-2) that missed high and outside.

PADRES 6, NATIONALS 3 SAN DIEGO — Drew Pomeranz allowed three solo homers in six innings and Adam Rosales drove in two runs, helping San Diego to the victory.

Pomeranz (6-7) struck out seven and walked one. The left-hander had lost four of his previous five decisions.

RED SOX 2, MARINERS 1 BOSTON — Boston left-hander David Price snapped a personal three-game losing streak by pitching eight sharp innings, and Mookie Betts hit a go-ahead homer.

Betts also had two singles for the Red Sox, who have won two in a row after dropping four of five.

INDIANS 3, WHITE SOX 2, 10 INNINGS

CLEVELAND — Jose Ramirez hit an RBI single with two out in the 10th inning, lifting Cleveland to the three-game sweep.

Ramirez's bases-loaded hit off David Robertson (0-1) skipped past first baseman Jose Abreu and into right field for Cleveland's second last-at bat win of the series. The AL Central-leading Indians improved to 7-2 against the White Sox, including six straight wins.

RANGERS 5, CARDINALS 4 ST. LOUIS — Jurickson Profar hit a two-run single in the eighth, helping Texas to its sixth straight win. It was Profar's first pinch-hit at-bat this season. ROYALS 2, TIGERS 1, 13 INNINGS KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Cheslor Cuthbert singled home Lorenzo Cain in the 13th inning, giving Kansas City the win. The Royals won six of seven on their homestand and lead the American League with a 25-8 home record. TWINS 7, YANKEES 4 MINNEAPOLIS — Ervin Santana pitched into the eighth inning to earn his first victory since May 14 and Minnesota avoided a four-game series sweep. ASTROS 6, REDS 0 HOUSTON — Evan Gattis and Luis Valbuena homered, helping Houston to the win. DIAMONDBACKS 5, PHILLIES 1 PHILADELPHIA — Archie Bradley pitched six strong innings and drove in a run to lead Arizona.

Coastal Carolina beats Florida

Andrew Beckwith matched his career high with seven strikeouts, Zach Remillard doubled and tripled in runs, and Coastal Carolina upset No. 1 national seed Florida 2-1 in the program's first College World Series game.

The Chanticleers of the Big South Conference pulled the stunner against the vaunted Florida pitching staff that sent to the mound two first-round picks, a second-rounder, third-rounder and 10th-rounder.

• Luken Baker hit a go-ahead threerun homer in the top of the ninth and TCU beat No. 5 national seed Texas Tech 5-3 on Sunday in a College World Series meeting of Big 12 rivals.

The Horned Frogs (48-16) trailed by a run after Hunter Hargrove's tiebreaking double in the bottom of the eighth. But after reliever Robert Dugger issued a walk to start the ninth and gave up a single to Evan Skoug, Baker sent a towering shot just inside the left-field foul pole into the seats above the bullpen.

The native of Akron rattled off moments from the lengthy list of Cleveland sports heartbreak and said what it meant for him to personally bring the Cavaliers their first championship.

Playing his sixth straight finals, James almost single-handedly carried the Cavs back into this series and finished with 27 points, 11 assists and 11 rebounds as the Cavs gave their city its first major sports winner since the Browns won the NFL title in 1964. He also had three blocked shots, including a key one of Andre Iguodala on a fast break in the final minutes.

An emotional James fell to the floor when this one ended with a second win in a week on Golden State's imposing home floor, surrounded by his teammates. Only moments earlier, he went down in pain with 10.6 seconds left after being fouled by Draymond Green while going for a dunk, then came back out to make the second of two free throws.

After four successful seasons in Miami and two titles with the Heat, James came back to the Cavs in hopes of winning the title this franchise and championship-starved city so coveted. It took a second try against Golden State after Cleveland lost to the Warriors in six games last year.

"I was calm. I was focused. I was locked in," James said.

Cleveland did it after a coaching change, with Tyronn Lue taking over in January for the fired David Blatt.

'We made history tonight," Lue said. "Cleveland, Ohio, we're coming back, baby!"

Kyrie Irving scored 26 points to cap his brilliant finals, including a 3-pointer over Curry with 53 seconds left.

Curry sat briefly on the bench to take in the scene after the Warriors made their last basket with 4:39 left.

"It hurts, man," Curry said. "Just proud of every single guy that stepped foot on the floor for our team this year. ... Hopefully we'll have many more opportunities to fight for championships and be on this stage because this is what it's all about."

Green had 32 points, 15 rebounds and nine assists, but the Warriors' record-setting season ended without the only prize this close-knit "Strength In Numbers" crew cared about from way back in the beginning — through the record 24-0 start as Coach of the Year Steve Kerr was out, Curry's second consecutive MVP campaign, and the 73 regular-season wins to break the 1995-96 Chicago Bulls' mark.

As Cleveland celebrated in the trophy ceremony, Green returned to the floor to congratulate the Cavs. He stopped by the winning locker room, too, and Warriors general manager Bob Myers brought in the freshly cut nets.

Golden State might always be remembered as one of the best teams ever that couldn't close it out, and Green is taking at least a good share of the blame after he sat out Game 5 on Monday night suspended for flagrant fouls.

The Cavs staved off elimination twice to force Game 7 back at Oracle Arena, where the Warriors went up 2-0 with a pair of lopsided wins to start this series.

Cleveland became just the fourth team to win an NBA Finals Game 7 on the road. Curry — who said beforehand he needed the best game of his career — scored 17 points on 6-for-19 shooting, while Splash Brother Klay Thompson added 14 points while making 6 of 17 shots.

"I didn't do enough to help my team win," Curry said. "It will haunt me for a while."

President Barack Obama, an avid basketball fan, returned to Washington aboard Air Force One late Sunday as the game entered its final, tense minutes. He watched until the end and did not come down the stairs until moments after the Cavs won.

This time, it will be Cleveland hosting the victory parade on Wednesday. A year ago at home, the Cavs had to watch Golden State win its first title in 40 years.

'Now we have our own parade," Irving said, "and we'll celebrate it the way it's supposed to be celebrated in Cleveland."

did Johnson. He didn't look at a board the rest of the day, taking on each shot regardless of the score and coming up with all the right shots — the 10-foot par save on the 16th, a cautious bunker shot on the 17th. and a 6-iron that settled the score. It dropped down 5 feet from the hole for a birdie that wrapped up a U.S. Open that was overdue.

The USGA wound up giving him the penalty shot after it was over, so Johnson closed with a 1-under 69 for a three-shot victory over Shane Lowry, Scott Piercy and Jim Furyk, a runner-up at Oakmont for the second straight U.S. Open.

"I still didn't want the penalty. I didn't think that I did anything to cause the ball to move," Johnson said. "But at the end of the day, it didn't affect what happened. So it doesn't bother me at all."

Finally, he's a major champion. Johnson scooped up 18-month son Tatum into his arms on Father's Day and raised the silver trophy for all to see.

"I've been here a bunch of times and haven't quite got it done," Johnson said. "But today, I did. And it feels really good.'

He saluted a Pittsburgh crowd that was on his side even amid all the uncertainty. The grandstands were raucous, with one fan shouting, "What's the call, USGA?" At the trophy presentation, when Fox Sports announcer Joe Buck brought up the penalty situation, the crowd booed.

Johnson finished at 4-under 276, the lowest winning score in nine U.S. Opens at Oakmont.

The lingering question was whether the toughest test in golf was tougher than it needed to be.

Johnson had a short par putt on the fifth hole, took a few practice strokes and as he placed the putter behind the ball, it moved slightly — backward. Johnson stepped back and called over the rules official, told him he didn't cause it to move. He tapped in for par.

Jeff Hall, senior director of rules and open championships for the USGA, said a staff member said on the radio that it might be worth another look. The USGA thought Johnson should know that his score might be one shot worse than it was, so it told him on the 12th tee.

"After looking at video, the actions he took could have caused the ball to move," Hall said. "We asked if there was some other reason the ball could have moved. He didn't state a reason."

But it led to confusion over the entire back nine — for Johnson and for the guys trying to catch him.

Lowry, who began the final round with a four-shot lead that he lost on the front nine, tied him when Johnson made bogey on the 14th.

Were they tied? Was Johnson trailing by one?

Jack Nicklaus, who won the first of his 18 majors at Oakmont in 1962, said if the USGA thought it might be a one-shot penalty, it should have done it right there and "let him get on with the job."

That's what he did, scrambling for pars, keeping his cool, thinking only the major that kept eluding him.

Johnson said he couldn't help but wonder if he was in for more bad luck at a major that he was poised to win.

"Just one more thing to add to the list, right?" he said.

The most painful was last year in the U.S. Open at Chambers Bay, when Johnson had a 12-foot eagle putt to win and three-putted for par to lose by one to Jordan Spieth. There also was that two-shot penalty at Whistling Straits that kept him out of a playoff in the 2010 PGA Championship when Johnson grounded his club in sand without realizing it was a bunker. He was chasing down Darren Clarke in the 2011 British Open when he hit a 2-iron out-of-bounds on the 14th hole. He lost a three-shot lead at Pebble Beach in the 2010 U.S. Open by closing with an 82.

Not this time. Lowry became the first player since Payne Stewart at Olympic Club in 1998 to lose a four-shot lead in the final round of the U.S. Open. He made birdie after being told of the potential Johnson penalty, but the Irishman lost his putting touch with three-putt bogeys on three straight holes. He closed with a 76.

Lowry and all the other players on the course were informed that Johnson might get penalized after his round.

"It didn't affect the way I played," Lowry said. "If anything, I credit Dustin for playing the way he played on the way in, having that hanging over him, because I probably would have wanted to know straightaway if it was me."

Swiss to last 16

Associated Press

PARIS — France and Switzerland settled for a 0-0 draw that suited both sides, while Albania staked its claim to a place in the last 16 of the European Championship by eliminating Romania in a 1-0 victory on Sunday.

Two years ago in Brazil, France overran the Swiss in a 5-2 rout at the World Cup but in Lille it was a very different story.

Switzerland matched France for possession to secure second place behind the host nation in Group A — and seal its first appearance in the knockout stages of the European Championship.

It's a job that hasn't been there and one that every Vulcans coach should have cheered. Oda, named the regions top tennis coach twice during a long and successful run at the school, knows what coaches need to get done and is now in a position to help them succeed.

He graduated from UH-Manoa with a business degree, became the school's nonpareil tennis coach after a two-year stint at the University of Idaho where he learned everything he needed to know from the school's head coach Greg South.

Oda and wife, Cori, came home after that experience in Vandal Land, because we wanted to raise our family here in the islands," and they were serious enough that when Idaho called and offered him the position after South resigned, Oda turned it down.

Coaching tennis on a partial salary had its winning benefits and its losing price tag. He was working three jobs to make the ends meet and after 2012, Oda had to step away and took a job working as the budget manager in Student Affairs.

Now, he's back in the athletic department full time after he worked as the events manager the last couple of years in addition to his regular job.

'This job marries the two tracks I've followed," he said. "I missed working with athletes regularly, but I know a little about budgets and travel, and these priorities coaches have, so I think I can be a help.

'People don't understand in D2, how many things are on the plate on a daily basis of these coaches that a lot of coaches — certainly D1 coaches — never have to deal with."

In some sense, Oda will be a little bit like a business and travel assistant for every coach at the school. Each sport has different priorities because each coach organizes his or her team in a distinctive way, so Oda is spending time getting with coaches for the purpose of removing a headache that isn't about teaching and coaching.

When you think of operational situations within the school, scholarship issues, which classes are transferrable, travel schedules, really, there's a long list of things all these coaches have to do that don't involve coaching and working with the students," he said. "If I can take a bit of that load off the shoulders of some of these coaches, give them a little more opportunity to coach and teach, I've done my job."

At the end of the day, how does someone not involved in the UHH athletic department know if the job's been done?

'My hope would be that we're more successful," Oda said. "I can't promise that, I can't promise anything, really, but it's my hope that I can do some background work, lighten the load just a bit and that by doing that, all our teams can communicate better and the coaches won't have so much stress with all the distractions.'

One thing that seems abundantly clear is that coaches at UHH are overburdened with work that pulls them away from coaching.

DEAR ABBY: I live with my parents and am not fond of children. My father volunteers me to baby-sit my nieces while they are right in front of us and before I have a chance to discuss anything. If I stand up for myself and say no, my father lays a guilt trip on me and tells the kids that their aunt is "being mean."

I'm grateful that my parents took me in after I graduated from university, which has allowed me to work on a second degree. However, when I am volunteered to do something I don't enjoy — like entertain the kids — my father somehow always manages to leave the house. He often lectures me about things I should do or things others should do, but he never does any of them himself. His excuse is that he works to support us financially. Am I being ungrateful and should I grin and bear it? Or should I do an intervention with Dad when the kids aren't over? – OVERTIRED AUNT

DEAR OVERTIRED: Assuming that you have told your father your feelings, he may feel that because he supports you, he has the right to volunteer your services. What might work would be to tell your sibling how you feel about being trapped into doing it — and about kids in general.

I know I wouldn't want any children of mine to be around someone who resents having to care for them. Perhaps your sibling will feel the same.

DEAR ABBY: I have had cancer for 12 years. This will be my last year. The chemo treatment was getting stronger and making me sick longer. I told most of my siblings that I decided on no more chemo. The doctor warned my daughter eight months ago that there will be no stopping the progression of my disease.

My daughter has a lot on her plate right now, finding and buying a house, getting a new job and planning her wedding for next year.

I have tried to help her plan for my death, but it only upsets her.

I feel great and better each day since I have been off the chemo. I have a positive attitude about the short future that's ahead of me.

So how do I tell my daughter this is my last year?

LIVING AND LOVING LIFE IN NEW ENGLAND members later.

DEAR LIVING AND LOVING: I'm sorry about your prognosis. Few people welcome the idea of their parents' passing, but it is a subject that needs to be discussed.

A way to get the message across to your daughter would be to call a family meeting so that she will have emotional support when she hears about your decision.

Announce that you are feeling better than you have in a long time because you are no longer having chemo, and make clear what your wishes are in the event of your death.

Right now your daughter is understandably focused on herself.

Do not expect that she will take the news well, and be sure to have your plans in writing so there will be no confusion among family

This year one of your terrific assets could prove to be a difficult talent to handle. You understand both sides of an issue or argument. Disagreements become less likely with the wisdom you gain. You often smile at what you see happening around you. If you are single, you find that people you date are highly attracted to you, yet also highly critical. Know when it's time to move on. If you are attached, you and your sweetie no longer respond to controversy in the same way. Be more accepting of each other's differences.

The Stars Show the ind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★ You could be forced to take a stronger stance than you had anticipated. Others might refuse to share any other details. It is very likely that a sequence of misunderstandings has led to this problem. Be careful when untangling the knots. Tonight: Happily head home early.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You will want to sort through a problem with a partner, but might need to adjust your perspective. Often the best way to achieve detachment is to pretend that you are someone else observing the situation. Tonight: Stay open, despite a potentially difficult conversation.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ You'll feel the difference as the Sun moves out of your sign. Your finances will become your focus. You still might be experiencing some difficulties with a loved one or dear friend. The caring that exists between you two will come through. Tonight: Be with a favorite person.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ You'll feel a change in the wind as sign. You will welcome a period of reflection. Confusion surrounds feelings and might result in strange behavior. Choose not to take an awkward comment personally. Tonight: Respond to someone's overture.

LEO (July 23-Aug.

22) ★★★ You'll understand a lot more than you initially thought you would. You might choose to keep your own counsel. What you are seeing is a tendency for others to confuse what is happening. Instead of getting involved, pull back.

Tonight: Observe more and say less.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ Emphasize what is important to you. Let your creativity surge and create various paths. Walk away from a tendency to be negative or out of sorts. Feelings run deeply, and others could be reactive. Try not to get involved. Tonight: Go for what you want, but avoid uproar.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct.

★★★ Pressure comes in from various sources. Listen to your inner voice with matters involving work as well as your personal life. You might feel as if you are sitting on a fuse about to be ignited. Understand that the less said right now, the better. Tonight: At home relax-

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ Your words might contradict what you really believe. You could feel as if there is no place to express your perceptions, as few will get them and several others will be offended. Do your best not to take others' comments personally. Tonight: Air your friend. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

viewpoint with a dear

★★★★ One-on-one relating will be more successful than it has been lately. Approach a volatile situation with care; otherwise, you could wind up with nothing to work with. Be careful with how much you say. Use caution with any financial agreements. Tonight: Count your change.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ You could be the centerpiece of others' conversations, and might need to disengage from a stressful situation. You'll feel as if you are doing the ultimate juggling act. Others are more likely to express their feelings in the next few weeks. Be a good listener. Tonight: You call it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ You might realize that a situation is more volatile than you had expected it to be. Keep your focus on your routine, and don't get up in the uproar. Know that you might be overly sensitive to someone's offthe-wall comment. Try to let it go. Tonight: Get some R and R.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★ You could be in a position where you no longer understand what is happening around you. Your friends suddenly might become very serious-minded. A meeting of colleagues will be intense. Meanwhile, you seem to have an ongoing case of spring fever. Tonight: Ever playful.

This day in history

The role the outside islands will play in the defense of the territory in event of war was told to members of the Hilo Junior Chamber of Commerce and their guests Thursday night by Lt. Col. V.S. Burton, commander of the Hawaii district.

The meeting, which was held at the Hilo Hotel, was highlighted also by the assurance of A.J. Porter, manager of Theo H. Davies & Co., Ltd. that the Shippers' Wharf committee will provide $400 for two centrifuge heads which are needed to establish a blood bank here.

Saying that it was "common knowledge" that the outside islands are being strengthened, Col. Burton outlined the duties of troops located here and how the civilian population can cooperate.

Airfields on the outside islands are being improved "to a considerable degree" and planes from Hickam and Wheeler fields will call frequently at these fields in training maneuvers.

War will mean the territory will have to step up the production of food to where "we are more or less self sustaining," he said.

Grand champion Yokozuna Kashiwado defeated Yokozuna Taiho in the final bout of the U.S.-Japan goodwill sumo tournament sponsored by the 442nd Veterans Association Sunday in the Civic Auditorium.

Kashiwado, Taiho's arch rival in the Japan sumo tourney, won the decision with a yorikiri, pushing his opponent out of the ring in about 30 seconds.

Kashiwado was presented the tourney's grand champion trophy donated by Central Pacific Bank from Tsutomu Taketa, vice-president and Hilo branch manager.

More than 4,000 sumo fans witnessed the two-day tournament of the Japan Sumo Association made up of 49 sumo wrestlers.

Hawaii's own Takamiyama — Jesse Kuhaulua of Maui — won Saturday's championship in the makushita division.

Photo caption: POLO CHAMPIONS – A Waiki'i Ranch Polo Club team captured the fourth annual Colorado Polo Classic championship in May at Denver's Cottonwood Riding Club. Tommy Harris was the winning captain with team members Tony Mullins of Hawaii, Ivan Haggerty of Australia, and Peter Sullivan of New Zealand.

The team won the championship, 6-4.
